

I'm not sure, if this counts, since they still exist, although not as buildings, per se, but there are, throughout the city, several former buildings that have pancaked down, so that they have basically become a roof sitting, tilted, on the ground. Said as it must be for the owners, I am rather fond of these.